In the evening Mr. Morrison discussed the possibility of evangelising the world in the present generation. He first called at-tention to the proposed evangelization of the world and the conversion of the world. He said that the former related to the the world and the conversion of the world. He said that the former related to this question of placing the gropel within the reach of every one in order that all might receive it. He expressed it as his belief that such a thing was possible and urged the following considerations:

First, if each professing thristian should give four times what he is at oreern giving, this would enable the missionary boards to increase the work four-fold, both as to missionaries and native workers. That on the basis of what has been done in the past fifty years, if such increase was made it would enable the missionary agencies to plant missions in every part of every land at present open to receive the gospel.

Mr. Morrison said also that if the number of those willing to go into the foreign field was increased in the same proportion, there would be no lack of laborers in the "harvest." But he said also that this state of things would not be brought about except through earnest prayer on the part of the entire membership of the church. Said he, "Few people pray that petition. The kingdom come," as they hould. It
